Conclusion

What are the key considerations?

- Conclusion
- Key Considerations

Plot twist: true challenges are not about version A or B. It's about the purpose of integrating Slack into Salesforce.

Phase 1 Discovery

Collect all the insights needed to understand the problem and identify solutions.

1.1 Objective

What is the challenge for this research?

Deliver a data-backed, user-centered recommendation for the optimal placement of the Slack LEX component on the Account, Opportunity, Quote and Cases pages (Org62 and OrgSF), with consistency across L2C objects as a long-term goal. Support the decision with testing, research, and a platform-wide lens to ensure scalability and adoption.

95%

Of sellers

who opened accounts that have Salesforce channels in LEX did not have impressions with the Slack component. This points to the Slack component either not loading correctly or being too difficult to locate by the end user (possibly hidden by the Activity component).

1.2 What's essential for this research to be effective?

- Team Alignment: Align the teams that are working or have worked on this to ensure everyone is aligned. Consider all perspectives.
- User-Centered Evaluation: Provide an objective, research-driven perspective to evaluate solutions based on user needs.
- Design for Scalability and Adoption: This is not about design preference — it's about long-term platform consistency, adoption, and scalability.

1.3 Structuring project timelines

Staying on track to ensure nothing is overlooked

1.4. Who I connect with

Focused on working closely with different teams to consider all ideas.

Phase 2

A/B Testing

Collect all the insights needed to understand the problem and identify solutions.

RESEARCH GOALS

- Validate SF Channels Components concepts; Test if it solves the problem and users would use it more.

TOPICS

- How important is the Activity section to sellers?
- What barriers do they face using Slack in Org62?
- Which version do you prefer?
- Is this new Slack place visible enough?

METHOD

Request feedback for future options

While focusing on the two most viable options, I also took the opportunity to gather feedback on how sellers might perceive this alternative in the future (possibly in OrgSF). Participants showed interest in this version but felt that sellers should first get comfortable using Slack in Org62, so they don't have to search for the Slack icon later.

Please note: Regarding the technical side, I understand that building this option is not feasible at the moment.

The screenshot displays the Salesforce user interface. At the top, there's a navigation bar with tabs for Sales, Home, Opportunities, Leads, Tasks, Files, Accounts, Contacts, Analytics, Chatter, and More. A search bar labeled 'Search Salesforce' is on the right. Below the navigation bar, the main content area shows the 'Account' page for 'Acme, Inc.'. The account details include Industry (Public Schools), Phone ((415) 111-8000), City (San Francisco, CA), Website (www.sfsd.org), and Account Owner (Jeannette Gomez). The left sidebar contains tabs for Home, Details, Sales, Service, Billing, and Asset Manager. The 'Details' tab is active, showing fields for Account Owner, Account Name, Parent Account, Type, Mid-Market, Industry, Annual Revenue, and Description. The right sidebar is a 'Slack Conversation' panel for the channel '# Acme, Inc.'. It shows a list of messages from users like Geeta Joshi, Zoe Maxwell, and Arcadio Buendia. The bottom of the Slack panel has a text input field and a 'Message the #Harmony Labs channel' button.

Collab/Slack Tab: 2nd alternative

Version D: No feedback requested but it can be considered a good proposal

No feedback has been collected on this version since it was not previously the most popular, but it is worth considering.

Positives:

- Easy to find
- Increased prominence as slack integration is a way forward
- No loss of real estate for key tabs

Concerns:

- Increased number of tabs

Things to check

- Look for any performance issues

Design Analysis - A/B/C Versions

Version A

Card (Activity main column)

Positives:

- Access conversations while working on Account, Opportunity, Quote and Cases.
- Easy findability

Concerns:

- Big Risk - Adding 2nd column will lose the real estate for the key focus areas of Quote (Especially the Products tab is going to be cramped)
- Change a page layout
- Activity and Insight tabs move to the main column. Increased number of tabs.

Version B

Tab (Change order)

Slack first
Activity 2nd

Positives:

- Minimal impact on the existing experience.

Concerns:

- Less space for adding features on the future.
- If the component is not placed higher on the page, it will remain poorly visible.

Version C

Card (Activity 2nd col)

Positives:

- Access conversations while working on Account, Opportunity, Quote and Cases.
- Easy findability
- The activity tab will stay the same.

Concerns:

- Big Risk - Adding 2nd column will lose the real estate for the key focus areas of Quote (Especially the Products tab is going to be cramped)
- Change a page layout

Design Analysis - Alternative Versions

Version A

Slide panel

Slack Widget (Utility Bar)

Positives:

- Access conversations while working on quote.
- Use of real estate for key focus areas of quote.
- Close/minimise when not in use or open in new window

Concerns:

- BT confirm is not feasible at the moment
- Will be a Learning curve when users switch from Org 62 to SF

Things to check

- Need to confirm on how to relate to each record when in Utility bar
- Will need confirmation from platform team

Version C

Card (Activity 2nd col)

Positives:

- Easy to find
- Increased prominence as slack integration is a way forward
- No loss of real estate for key tabs

Concerns:

- Increased number of tabs

Things to check

- Look for any performance issues

Potential challenges we might face

Feedback from sellers will help us resolve these concerns

Version A

Card (Activity tab main column)

- Would this resolve the current lack of visibility of the Slack component?
- What would happen if we moved the Activity and Insight tabs to the main column? Would sellers have trouble finding the Activity tab in its new location, or is it visible enough there?
- As an option, the Activity tab could be moved further to the left for better visibility.

Version B

Tab Component (Change order)

- Since the Activity tab is key for sellers, how easily would they find it if it were moved to make room for the Slack tab?
- Sellers are used to finding the Activity tab in the second column. If we swap it with the Slack tab, would its proximity still make it easy to find? This change would affect their workflow?
- Would this resolve the current lack of visibility of the Slack component?

Version C

Card Component (Activity tab 2nd column)

- Is this technically feasible?
- How much space would it take up on the page?
- Would users still be able to work effectively while it's open?
- Could it be mistaken for the Agentforce slide panel component?

Which version did you prefer and why?

Explanation from each participant:

Why version A?

- Participant 3: Originally I preferred Version B, but then I realised I had Activity in the main column what give me more space to review it. Although I also think that version B could be a good option to encourage sellers to use it.
- Participant 4: As a AE Slack Specialist I preferred Version A, since my main problem at the moment with Slack component in opportunity page was it is placed very far down. I wish It would be fixed on the top.
- Participant 5: Preferred the idea of a dedicated Slack component rather than reordering components. She did not see Version B as a significant improvement and leaned toward a more clearly defined, standalone Slack experience for better usability and visibility.

Why version B?

- Participant 1: Version B wouldn't impact too much on the seller workflow.
- Participant 2: I prefer Version B_so I can click in Activity tab and leave it selected since I use it all the time and I prefer to not have big changes on my actual workflow.
- Participant 6: Preferred version B because it maintains the current CRM layout while improving Slack visibility—strikes a balance for both Slack and non-Slack users.
- Participant 7: He prefers Version B because it preserved existing Salesforce behaviors, like the traditional activity tab. Seen as a lower-impact change with better alignment to current workflows.
- Participant 8: Prefers Version B due to its versatility and balance for different user needs. Suggests it better supports visibility and practical use.

The main problem at the moment with Slack component in opportunity page was it is placed very far down. I wish It would be fixed on the top.

Stephen Rhodes, AE Slack Specialist

I don't use Slack in Org62 because I avoid using the "Create Channels" button, as it usually leads to more unnecessary channels. I already have over 200, and it's overwhelming to keep up with them. I do see value in linking them to existing channels, but this action is unnoticed because it is not visible enough.

Phase 4 Conclusion

Conclusion

- Most participants preferred Option B due to its minimal impact on the existing Sales Cloud experience. It preserves the familiar tab structure, making it easier for non-Slack users to adapt.
- However, users already working with Slack in Org62 favored Option A, as it gives Slack more visibility and supports their collaborative workflows more effectively.
- Key takeaway: While Option B is preferred for its low friction, Option A aligns better with Slack power users.
- The side panel is seen as a promising future enhancement by users already familiar with Slack in Sales Cloud, offering more space and flexibility. However, others believe the immediate focus should be on increasing adoption through Version A or B. They note the current Slack icon is hard to spot and suggest improving its visibility—such as using a purple background—to boost engagement.

 However this research surface insight that need to be considerate to releivate this integration Sack into Salesforce

Key Considerations

- Placement:

- Ensure the Slack component is always positioned at the top of the page — currently, it can appear too far down, making it easy to miss.
- Activity is very important to sellers, but they don't seem significantly affected by its location change—as long as it remains visible, as in both options. Furthermore, many point out that if they didn't see it, they would look for it without any problem.

- Adoption:

- Sellers are confused between Chatter and Slack in Org62, which may impact adoption. Some of them are worried about how to connect with support teams in case Slack replaced chatter.
- Participants shared that managers usually play a key role in driving adoption.

- Features Integration: They indicated they would be more likely to use the Slack component if it offered more functionality, as the app offers much more and this component is very limited.

- Privacy: There are also concerns about how secure or visible Slack channels really are.

- Uncertain Call to Action & Overwhelm of information:

- Some avoid using Slack because they don't want to create more channels — they already have too many. The abundance of communication channels feels overwhelming.
- They might use Slack more if they understood that they only need to link to existing channels.

- Purpose: What is the purpose of having Slack into Salesforce? Clearer communication about the specific benefits this integrated component offers is needed.
